Rural Electric trucks get a new look

Question: What's white with a small sign on the side?

Old Answer: An RECC line truck (And just about every other utility vehicle on the road!)

New Answer: NOT an RECC line truck!

You won't have to squint any longer to recognize your cooperative's vehicles on the road or in your driveway. The big trucks, pickups and vans are now sporting a new look that's recognizable at any speed.

Starting with a bold "RECC" and a new logo design on the doors, and a broad stripe pattern on the rear bodies, the vehicles will remind everyone of our presence in the rural communities. With 25 employees and over 1,300 miles of line in five counties, Rural Electric plays an important role in the economic vitality of central Illinois.

"After various color schemes were used in the co-op's early years, RECC went with the standard white trucks in the 1990s, like many other electric utilities, but it was hard to tell one company's vehicle from another," observed President/CEO David Stuva.

The effort to come up with a unique look started last fall, with a study of the many designs used across the country. Member Service Electrician Jeff Lancaster worked on different elements, shapes and colors, and developed a plan that would fit the various sizes and shapes of our truck fleet.

The new decals were printed by Lilly Signs in Taylorville, a member of RECC. Jeff Lancaster and other employees applied the decals, with all 13 vehicles completed in April.

"Our employees have always been proud of our work vehicles, and taken great care of them to make sure they're ready for the job of building and maintaining our distribution lines. The new decals are just a reminder to our members and the public that we're out there working for them, every day!" says David Stuva.

Rural Electric's office will be closed on Monday, May 29 in observance of Memorial Day.

RECC is working for electrical safety

Take the time to plug into safety

We all depend on electricity to power our lives, but accidents can happen when electricity is improperly used. During Electrical Safety Month, we are working even harder to raise awareness about the dangers of electricity.

It is no accident that safety is a top priority at Rural Electric Convenience Cooperative. We are committed to a culture of safety that is integral to our daily operations. In fact, RECC is part of the Rural Electric Safety Achievement Program (RESAP) that follows specific guidelines and protocols for electrical safety that are considered leading practices.

Our lineworkers are required to wear personal protective equipment at all times when on the job. This includes special fire-resistant clothing that will self-extinguish, limiting potential injuries from burns and sparks. Insulated and rubber gloves are worn in tandem to protect from electrical shock. Our safety team regularly discusses important safety issues pertaining to work within the building as well as out in the field.

RECC's concern for safety extends beyond our employees. We care deeply about the safety of our members, and this month, we encourage you think about using electricity safely. According to the Electrical Safety Foundation International, thousands of people in the U.S. are critically injured and electrocuted as a result of electrical fires, accidents and electrocution in their own homes.

To promote safety education in our local communities, we offer informative programs and demonstrations to schools and community groups. We frequently provide electrical safety content in this Rural Hilights newsletter, and we encourage the public to contact us if they see a downed power line or any other type of dangerous electrical situation. We strive to provide our communities with safe, reliable and affordable electricity and to serve as your trusted energy advisor, now and well into the future.

For tips about how to keep you and your loved ones safe, visit the Electrical Safety Foundation International website at www.esfi.org.

May is National Electrical Safety Month

Steve Hancock from Corn Belt Energy Cooperative (Bloomington) presented Live Line Demo programs on March 21 and 22 in Litchfield and Carlinville, respectively, for local 4th grade classes from Montgomery and Macoupin counties. The programs included safety information for 120-volt household power as well as high-voltage utility power lines at 7,200 volts. The presentations were organized by the University of Illinois Extension, and sponsored by RECC, M.J.M. Electric, Ameren, and Lincoln Land Community College.

Youth Day offers insights to state government

This year's Illinois Rural Electric Youth Day introduced 240 high school students to several of our state's elected leaders, along with some insights about electric and telephone cooperatives.

Youth Day was sponsored on March 29 by the Association of Illinois Electric Cooperatives, with 25 co-ops from across the state participating. Rural Electric Convenience Cooperative sponsored six students from area schools at the day-long event. The group included Payton Allen and Savannah Norris from Auburn; Sophia Sanguedolce and Hailey Winslow from Glenwood High School, Jacob Harris from Pawnee, and Emily Huxtable from North Mac.

At the State Capitol, the RECC group met with Representatives Avery Bourne and Sara Wojcicki Jimenez, along with Senator Sam McCann. During lunch, Comptroller Susana Mendoza addressed students and chaperones and challenged them to take an interest in the political process and encouraged them to use their voice and reach out to their representatives and senators. Sophia Marcolla, the 2016-17 Illinois Youth Leadership Council Representative from Adams Electric Cooperative, spoke about her experience on the Youth to Washington tour and the importance of leadership. While in Springfield, the students also visited the Old State Capitol and Abraham Lincoln Presidential Museum.

At the end of the day the students were interviewed for the chance to participate in the Youth to Washington Tour to be held June 9-16. Winners of the week-long trip were Jacob Harris and Savannah Norris. Watch for news on the Washington trip in this summer's issues of Rural Highlights!
